SEARCHLIGHT LABELS PLYMOUTH SKINS AFTER TOWN CENTRE DEMO

Skinheads in Plymouth have been labelled Nazis because they held a demonstration in support of their friends serving in the Gulf War.

The smear was made in the April issue of the anti-fascist magazine, Searchlight. Under the heading, "Nazis Halt Peace March", it ran a quarter page article based on an earlier report which had appeared in the Plymouth Evening Herald, but without any apparent attempt to verify the story.

The Plymouth Evening Herald had devoted its front and centre pages to detailing the confrontation that took place in Plymouth town centre, between peace protesters and skinheads who supported the Gulf War, on Saturday 16th February.

Plymouth skins have a long

The two opposing groups eventually came face to face, and despite a police presence, the peace march was abandoned because the organisers feared trouble.

The skinheads returned to a day of football and drinking, unaware that their Support The Troops demo would appear in the Herald under the headline, "National Front Vows Revenge On Traitors Who Burn Flag".

A couple of NF skinheads were present, and one managed to talk the local reporter into believing it was a National Front rally.

have sported the NF's logo at the very least.

Following the feature in the Herald, and the one in Searchlight, Plymouth skins have been banned from a number of pubs and have been abused in the street. More seriously, posters have appeared in the town, falsely naming certain skinheads as Nazis, and this has led to trouble between skinheads and local anti-fascist veggie punks.

Skinheads regularly appear in Searchlight's pages, usually in connection with Blood And Honour, but this seems to be a case of following the old tabloid line of all skinheads being racist thugs.

In its February issue, Searchlight, carried a two page article exposing one time Godfather Of Oi!, Garry Bushell, as allegedly having links with the Front and other extremist organisations. The article was one of the most poorly researched pieces to appear in the magazine for a very long time, and not surprisingly Bushell took the magazine to court over it.

Obviously Plymouth skins don't have the resources to do likewise, and so once again the skinhead cult is dragged into the gutter by those who claim to know better. But if they were that clever, they would recognise that patriotism isn't the same as being a Nazi.

Plymouth skins have a long tradition of serving in the armed forces and a number of those present on the day were themselves ex-servicemen. When they heard about the proposed peace march, skinheads in the town decided to hold their own counter-demonstration to show their support for friends and family who were serving in the Gulf at the time.

On the Saturday, the skinheads together with a number of Plymouth Argyle fans, waited outside a pub for the peace march to pass. They were carrying a large Union Jack, with the words, THESE

That wasn't the case at all, as has since been pointed out in the Herald. The majority of those present were not NF, and Plymouth skins generally pride themselves in their no truck with extremist politics stance.

Even Searchlight admitted that those present looked more like "football hooligans than politicians" and pointed out that the National Front hadn't exactly fallen over itself to support the Gulf War. In fact no extreme right wing organisation had done so.

What's more if it had been an NF demonstration, you would have expected the Union Jack to have sported the NF's logo at the very least.

NEITHER RED OR RACIST - JUST SKINHEAD!

John Byrne has been a skinhead since 1969 and he's been taking photos of skins since 1980. His collection runs into thousands, and a number appeared in two skinhead photo books in the early Eighties. Now four of his photos are available as black and white postcards. They are 45p each (plus a SAE or 2 IRCs towards postage). For more information or to place an order, write to John at 73 St. James House, High Street, Brighton. BN2 1RW. England.

Congratulations to Private Tam Gow of the Royal Scots who was awarded the Military Medal for bravery in the Gulf War. He singlehandedly destroyed a dug-in Iraqi tank and captured seven Iraqi soldiers. Well done too to the RAF's very own Paul Rickinson who kept the Republican Guard very busy with not so friendly fire. Any other skinheads who served in the Gulf, please write in with a piccie so we can put it in the next issue.

News In Brief

EAST GERMAN SKINS ON RAMPAGE

German reunification has led to increasing skinhead-related violence in towns and cities in what was once East Germany. A number of people have died and many more have been injured in the violence directed mainly at immigrants, gypsies and other minorities.

Unification has led to massive rises in unemployment in the East and very few of the promised benefits of a Western lifestyle. This, together with the fact that Germany is once again whole, has increased support for nationalist and extreme right wing groups in the five states that once formed East Germany.

An estimated 10,000 youths are now involved in neo-Nazi activity, and a large proportion of them are skinheads. And whenever news reports reach the UK got off at the next stop. He died from his injuries days later, but even his funeral was attacked by neo-Nazis. Similar attacks have taken place all over East Germany.

Football violence towards the end of last season had also reached unprecedented levels, with even smaller clubs picking up a hooligan following. The European Cup game between Dynamo Dresden and Yugoslavia's Red Star Belgrade had to be abandoned because of crowd trouble, despite the presence of 1,000 police officers.

What isn't generally appreciated is that the term skinhead is applied to virtually every youth involved in hooliganism or violence. What's more, even those youths involved who have crops and wear boots, often know very little about the skinhead cult.

DRESSING HARD, DRESSING SMART

Footwear

Judging by some of the mistakes made in the last issue of SKINHEAD TIMES, it was obviously put together under the influence of one can of beer too many. Some of the typesetting looked like it was fresh out of a stock car race (mind you, it looked fine with a few more beers inside you).

No column suffered more than this one. A camel in the top pocket of your crombie doesn't look that good really. In fact it looks bloody stupid. Instead of camel, it should have read hankie. And above the left breast pocket of a Levi's jacket, it is customary to sew on a Levi's patch from the back of a pair of jeans. Not piss about with the red tag.

Even funnier though was that nobody pointed out the mistakes. So either there are a lot of skinheads struggling along with a camel in tow or you too are word monkey was written on the sole's tread) because DMs and other boots only came in men's sizes.

Boots that laced up to your knee-caps (and arm pits in some cases) were a definite post-punk phenomenon. Still worn, but only at the risk of being labelled a bonehead. Plus by the time you've laced them up, it's hardly worth going out.

Another punk trapping was to change the colour of your laces. Depending on where you lived, red was meant to be NF, white anarchy and so on. The problem was every area had its own colour scheme, and today you can read very little into them.

For decent boots it's well worth buying from a shop or a stall that gypsies buy from. They are often cheap, very smart and give years of service. The brogue boots that are currently gaining in popularity in skinheads circles are a good example of what gypsies have been wearing for years now.

Brogue pattern, tan or burgundy, ten holes, all leather with a sole that can be replaced and hard-wearing heels with built in blakeys, segs or whatever you want to call those little metal things that click and spark like good 'uns. So what is it this issue? Footwear. And we'll kick off with boots. When the skinhead cult was looking for a uniform, it drew heavily on the everyday workwear of manual workers. Hence the union shirts, the braces and of course the boots. In those days, any half decent pair workmen's boots would do. Army boots, labourers boots, miners boots, all had their followers in different areas. And if you had a make of boots that nobody else had, but that still looked the business, they were well worth parading about in.

Most boots were either brown or black leather, lace-up, and rarely more than 12 holes in height. Steel toe-capped boots proved particularly popular. For aggro, there was nothing better, and often they were worn with the steel exposed or the caps painted (often in football colours). Doctor Marten boots didn't really become widely accepted until after steelies were banned from football matches during the '69-'70 season. Once they'd arrived though, they were here to stay, not least because they are more comfortable than your average pair of boots and polish up a lot better too. The only real drawback is that if you wear the sole away, it can't be replaced.

Astronauts were a popular brand, and were so-called because the DM sole was supposedly like walking on the moon. Younger kids and girls often had to settle for ankle boots and Monkey boots (the Loafers, non-lace-up shoes with tassles and sometimes fringes, are more of a sure fire winner. The Dance Craze album made them essential footwear during the 2 Tone days. They used to be popular with girls since they came in smaller sizes. An old penny piece was often attached, hence the phrase penny loafers.

Another shoe once popular was the old moccasin, right up to the 2 Tone days in fact. Now you hardly ever see them, probably because everyone's Mum has a fluffy pair as slippers.

OI! WE'RE STILL HERE!

After Costa Rica did the dirty over Scotland in the 1990 World Cup, I thought I'd had enough of Italy to last me a lifetime. After all, once you've heard one joke about Italian tanks being the only ones with reverse gear, you've heard them all.

But just when you think it's safe to mention the words Scotland and football in the same sentence, up pops an Italian Oi! compilation to bring the Italia '90 nightmares flooding back. Still at least we gubbed Sweden.

It's good to see after all these years, and after all the shit that's been slung in its direction, the spirit of Oi! lives on. In Britain it's unlikely that we'll ever return to the glory days of The 4 Skins, The Business and all the other names gathering dust in Oi! The Hall Of Fame, but if the compilation album, Oi! Siamo Ancora Qui!! (Oi! We're Still Here), is anything to go by, all's not lost. And Oi! is certainly doing very nicely thank you very much down sunny Italy skinhead crews, different towns and over that old chestnut, football.

It took a good few years to put their house in order, but after a few false starts an Oi! Festival in Bologna in 1989, with hometown boys Ghetto 84, Klasse Kriminale and Strike, rekindled the Oi! flame of having a laugh and having a say.

In many ways, Oi! Siamo Ancora Qui!!, shows how much has been achieved since then. Like Oi! compilations the world over, it has its high points as well as its low ones, but the overall impression is that Italian Oi! is alive and kicking as hard as ever.

It doesn't matter if you can't understand the lyrics (after a few pints who cares anyway?), but for any doubters, there's an English lyric sheet, complete with band histories to keep you busy while the record abuses your turntable.

As far as Italian Oi! goes, Klasse Kriminale should need no terrace style pop Oi! is as good as anything doing the rounds under the guise of Oi! today.

What's more, Klasse Kriminale have always stood on a platform of no politics and a united Oi! movement. Read any interview by them and that's what you'll get, but even so Savona's favourite sons and daughter have come in for stick from all sides. Depending on where the petty politicians are standing, the band are either filthy reds or raving Nazis.

Neither is the case, but that doesn't help the band's cause. Recently the Nazi tag cost them gigs in Germany, and that after they'd just played with The Angelic Upstarts (themselves labelled as

Klasse Kriminale have got it right. Most skinheads are sick and tired of party political bullshit from both sides of the great divide. And that goes for Hitler just as much as it does for old smoking Joe Stalin.

All the other bands on the compilation take a similar stance over politics. Keep them for the ballot box, not skinhead gigs. And that's the way it's been in Italy since the first Oi! Festival at Monz back in '82.

Of the bands on the album, only Rough survive from those heady days. They were the first Oi! band to be committed to vinyl, beating even the famous Nabat to the draw. Hardcore meets Oi!, but certainly not as catchy as Klasse Kriminale's two offerings.

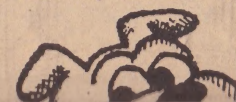

Other highlights of the album are Ghetto 84, with two tracks worth a second listen. The first Feccia (Dregs) contains the classic line, "If we are dregs, you prick-heads, then long life to dregs!". The second track is X-rated Splodge material about Magic Manlio the better.

Asociale's La Gente Reale Non Muore Mai (Real People Never Die) could be an anthem for Italian Oi!, as could the Oi! Connection's version of The 4 Skins' Chaos, dedicated to a gone but not forgotten skinhead called Cicci.

All in all, it's an album worth adding to any half-decent street collection. More importantly though it puts Italian Oi! on the map and throws down a challenge to other countries. Get up off your arses, organise your own gigs and put out your own records. And let the world now that Oi! is still here and is in no hurry to go away.

To order the album, write to Havin' A Laugh Records, C.P. Succ.9 (Lavagnola), 17100 Savona. Italy. It'll cost you 13,000 lire (about £6-£7) plus postage (4,000 lire for Europe, 8,000 for elsewhere). Any half decent bank will sell you Italian funny money or you can send an international postal order at your local Post Office.

After Costa Rica did the dirty over Scotland in the 1990 World Cup, I thought I'd had enough of Italy to last me a lifetime. After all, once you've heard one joke about Italian tanks being the only ones with reverse gear, you've heard them all.

But just when you think it's safe to mention the words Scotland and football in the same sentence, up pops an Italian Oi! compilation to bring the Italia '90 nightmares flooding back. Still at least we gubbed Sweden.

It's good to see after all these years, and after all the shit that's been slung in its direction, the spirit of Oi! lives on. In Britain it's unlikely that we'll ever return to the glory days of The 4 Skins, The Business and all the other names gathering dust in Oi! The Hall Of Fame, but if the compilation album, Oi! Siamo Ancora Qui!! (Oi! We're Still Here), is anything to go by, all's not lost. And Oi! is certainly doing very nicely thank you very much down sunny Italy way.

Italian Oi! has had its problems just like everywhere else. During the heyday of Oi! during the early Eighties, a series of successful Italian Oi! festivals was brought to an abrupt end when trouble broke out at Florence. Fighting erupted between skins and punks, rival skinhead crews, different towns and over that old chestnut, football.

It took a good few years to put their house in order, but after a few false starts an Oi! Festival in Bologna in 1989, with hometown boys Ghetto 84, Klasse Kriminale and Strike, rekindled the Oi! flame of having a laugh and having a say.

In many ways, Oi! Siamo Ancora Qui!!, shows how much has been achieved since then. Like Oi! compilations the world over, it has its high points as well as its low ones, but the overall impression is that Italian Oi! is alive and kicking as hard as ever.

It doesn't matter if you can't understand the lyrics (after a few pints who cares anyway?), but for any doubters, there's an English lyric sheet, complete with band histories to keep you busy while the record abuses your turntable.

As far as Italian Oi! goes, Klasse Kriminale should need no introduction. They've been stomping the boards since 1985 and have done as much as anyone to keep the Oi! scene alive and kicking in Wopsville.

Havin' A Laugh Records, who put out the compilation, is run by Marco and Antonella from the band, and their own brand of terrace style pop Oi! is as good as anything doing the rounds under the guise of Oi! today.

What's more, Klasse Kriminale have always stood on a platform of no politics and a united Oi! movement. Read any interview by them and that's what you'll get, but even so Savona's favourite sons and daughter have come in for stick from all sides. Depending on where the petty politicians are standing, the band are either filthy reds or raving Nazis.

Neither is the case, but that doesn't help the band's cause. Recently the Nazi tag cost them gigs in Germany, and that after they'd just played with The Angelic Upstarts (themselves labelled as fascists in the early days, but now darlings of the left).

Politics gives rise to such blinkered views, it's not funny. It must be obvious to even the thickest plank of wood walking this Earth that no one creed has all the answers, so why do they insist on acting like bible bashers on your doorstep?

Klasse Kriminale have got it right. Most skinheads are sick and tired of party political bullshit from both sides of the great divide. And that goes for Hitler just as much as it does for old smoking Joe Stalin.

All the other bands on the compilation take a similar stance over politics. Keep them for the ballot box, not skinhead gigs. And that's the way it's been in Italy since the first Oi! Festival at Monz back in '82.

Of the bands on the album, only Rough survive from those heady days. They were the first Oi! band to be committed to vinyl, beating even the famous Nabat to the draw. Hardcore meets Oi!, but certainly not as catchy as Klasse Kriminale's two offerings.

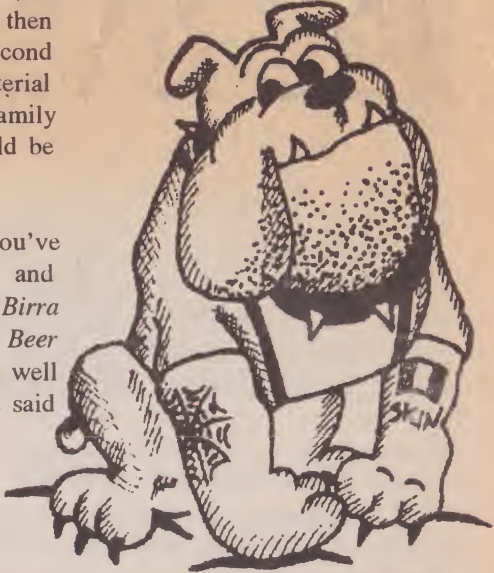

Other highlights of the album are Ghetto 84, with two tracks worth a second listen. The first Feccia (Dregs) contains the classic line, "If we are dregs, you prick-heads, then long life to dregs!". The second track is X-rated Splodge material and not the sort of thing a family newspaper like this one should be mentioning.

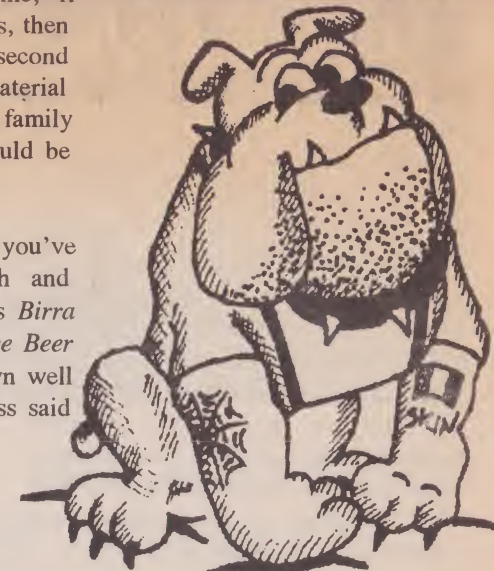

Like all good Oi! albums, you've got bands having a laugh and having a say. Alkoolnauti's Birra Gratis Per I Lavoratori (Free Beer For The Workers) goes down well in any language, and the less said about Magic Manlio the better. Asociale's La Gente Reale Non Muore Mai (Real People Never Die) could be an anthem for Italian Oi!, as could the Oi! Connection's version of The 4 Skins' Chaos, dedicated to a gone but not forgotten skinhead called Cicci.

All in all, it's an album worth adding to any half-decent street collection. More importantly though it puts Italian Oi! on the map and throws down a challenge to other countries. Get up off your arses, organise your own gigs and put out your own records. And let the world now that Oi! is still here and is in no hurry to go away.

To order the album, write to Havin' A Laugh Records, C.P. Succ.9 (Lavagnola), 17100 Savona. Italy. It'll cost you 13,000 lire (about £6-£7) plus postage (4,000 lire for Europe, 8,000 for elsewhere). Any half decent bank will sell you Italian funny money or you can send an international postal order at your local Post Office.

NOW THAT'S WHAT I CALL OI!

Here's a few other Oi!-some sounds for you to annoy the neighbours with. Pick of the bunch is the demo from Spanish band, Zakarrak. Ten tracks of good old fashioned Oi!, including covers of Symarip's Skinhead Girl and Sham's If The Kids Are United. Definitely worth getting hold of, even if you can't understand the lingo. Info from Oskar Aransaez, Plaza Maisu Arambarri 3,3, Mondragon 20500 (Guipuzcoa). Spain.

Another band with a lot of promise are Cambridge's very own Another Man's Poison. Now That's What I Call deserves vinyl treatment pronto, although the other two tracks on the demo only get by because of the Micky Fitz-like vocals. Info from Charlie, 33 Tothill Road, Swaffham Prior, Cambridge. CB5 OJX.

If hardcore's your cup of cha check out Germany's Smurftorks. Six thrash and bash cuts in the name of Smurfcore, including a great piss take of cock rock. DM6,- or £3 or its equivalent from 54-46, Postlagerkarte Nr. 024735 B, D-4200 Oberhausen 1. Germany.

Finally, Springtoifel (pictured left) have an excellently package LP out, with booklet, called Satanische Takte to celebrate ten years of playing pub-style rock n' roll. A real mixed bag it is too, with hints of The Pogues, The Riffs and Iron Maiden. A bit too heavy in places, but Handbrems more than makes up for the dodgy Rejects metal efforts. DM20,-, £7 or its equivalent from U. Grossmann, Postfach 1718, 8630 Coburg 1. Germany.

FANZINES

There's certainly some decent fanzines kicking about at the moment, most of which seem to come from Germany. 54-46 Pressure Drop still tops the old skinzine league, and rightly so. Certainly a lot of other fanzines could learn a trick or two from it. Wide range of well written articles, well laid out and decent piccies.

Skintonic is good in all those quarters too, but is coming in for increasing criticism for its left wing political stance. Saying that non-political Oi! skins are the rat's tail of the Nazi bonehead movement is well off the mark and does nobody any favours. And such talk gives SHARP a political dimension that it was never intended to have. Skinheads don't have to chose between left and right. Right and wrong maybe, but more and more skins are getting pissed off with being used by politicians.

Virtual open war has been declared between Skintonic and a number of the other German fanzines. A lot of its down to

The Further Adventures Of Ska-Boom (Alternative Image)

Ska-Boom, despite what the knockers said, have outlasted many of the supposedly ska'd for life bands. And this vid shows why they are playing to decent sized houses and sending them home happy.

A few too many bog standard covers are pulled out the old pork pie for my liking, Israelites getting murdered in the process, and a ten minute version of Romeo kills one of their better originals.

Still Nick "Steamy Windows" Murphy (so-called because of his misuse of the band's van for immoral purposes after a certain gig) and the boys ain't all bad. For a start they slags a few students and come good with cuts like Ska Summer and More Tea Vicar?. Definitely worth catching live, and if you miss out, this video is a well-produced second best.

Dumpling under. Ram Jam (B. Claudet, Residence Hanovre Esc. 7, Rue De Venise, 66000 Perpignan France), Peanuts (18 Farnham St, Belfast. BT7 2FN*), Boothboys (Apt. de Correos 3.029, Madrid 28080. Spain), Shock Troops (Wolfgang Diehl, Friedenstr. 12, 6725 Romerberg 2. Germany), and S.O.S. (Scheffold, Postfach 22 11, 7990 Friedrichschafen. Germany).

THE TWO TONE STORY CONTINUES

Just when it looked like the ska scene was on the wain again, with bands folding and record labels disappearing, along comes a few old friends from the 2 Tone days to perk the old spirits up.

Why they didn't come back a year or two ago, and give a then growing ska scene a much needed leg up to respectability, begs more than the odd question. Johnny-Come-Latelys you could call them, but the joke's on them if their only motive behind playing ska again was making money.

Mind you a few of them can't be doing too badly. Take Pauline Black's Selecter for instance, who have been appearing at 2 Tone revival gigs around the country. All it amounts to is Pauline, admittedly as lovely as ever, with fellow Selecter Neol Davies, singing Selecter songs with Bad Manners backing them.

Great stuff and top marks for entertainment value, but it is really nothing more than Manners with a couple of guests on stage. If it was billed as that the fans would be in for a real treat and a bonus for their ticket money, but by naming them Pauline Black's Selecter someone's pulling a fly one. It puts another band on the bill and another couple of quid on the ticket price.

It's sad when people and bands you worshipped as kids, piss on you after all these years despite claims of appreciating their fans. Mind you, Bad Manners have long given up that ghost. They toured the States last year with a rider contract that must have bumped up ticket prices by a couple of dollars a show.

Better has come from The Specials. At a gig in Coventry's Tic Toc club this year the highly rated Cosmics were joined on stage by Jerry Dammers, Lynval Golding and Neville Staples.

The Special Beat, featuring ex-members of The Specials,

The Beat and The Loafers, have also been giving value for money at the few gigs they played recently. Rumour has it that Uncle Sam's and Japan will be playing host to the band soon. If they can smuggle an aging Sean Flowerdew through customs.

All this has left The International Beat a bit out in the cold. Still no sign of their debut Lp, although a four track 12" is out now entitled Danny Boy.

And at last The Nutty Boys, Lee and Chris from Madness together with the likes of Mad Tad of Riffs infamy, have been gigging. Don't expect a night of Madness classics though (although Take It Or Leave It gets an airing), but you'll still get a great night out.

Artiste, the following refreshments at the times indicated:

- a) At Load-in: To be available immediately upon arrival, at load-in: coffee, tea, assorted juices, waters and sodas, a tray of assorted fresh sandwiches, a tray of assorted fresh fruits, and a tray of assorted fresh pastries, bagels, muffins, and donuts.
- b) During Soundcheck: To be placed in the Artiste's dressing room during soundcheck:
 - 1(one) case Dark Beer
 - 1(one) case Light Beer
 - 1(one) case Coca Cola
 - 1/2 (one half) case Seven-Up
 - 4 (four) quarts fresh Orange Juice
 - 4 (four) large bottles Gatorade
 - 4 (four) large bottles Perrier water
 - 4 (four) large bottles Evian water
 - 10 (ten) Snickers candy bars
 - 1(one) bottle whiskey
 - 1(one) bottle Tequila
 - 1(one) bottle multi-vitamins
 - 1(one) bottle vitamin C
 - 1(one) large container of ice
- c) After Soundcheck: To be served immediately after the soundcheck, a hi quality two-course hot meal of the traditional local kind sufficient for twelve (12) hungry adults. Meal shall include main course, two vegetables, salad or soup, bread, potato or rice, drinks (juices, sodas, waters, milk and beer) and desert. NO FAST FOOD. NO PIZZA. NO LAZAGNE. NO KENTUCKY FRIED CHICKEN. NO HAMBURGERS.
- d) If meals are unavailable: PURCHASER will pay Artiste fifteen ($15.00) dollars, in cash, per member of band and crew per diem (not to be deducted from Artiste's fee), in full, immediately following sound check. (eg. $15 times 10 members = $150).
- e) During Show: During the show PURCHASER will deliver one (1) case of cold beer and one (1) case of assorted sodas, waters, and juices to Artiste's dressing room.
- f) If this is a campus show where alcohol is prohibited by law:

The band we've all

WE'RE THE SOCCER HOOLIES

Here's a band for all you football hooligans. The soon to be infamous The Soccer Hoolys, who sing about life on the terraces and on the piss. A sort of Macc Lads at the footie sort of effort.

To date, The Soccer Hoolys' main claim to fame is being banned from doing a version of Bananarama's Talking Italian, which would have put the Heysel riots back on the map. Now they have to be content with songs like Ipswich Slags and Throwing Bricks At Burnley Fans.

The band are made up of player manager Mickey The Guvnor, on guitar and vocals, and star striker, Bournemouth Steve on bass. There's also a drummer and another guitarist waiting in the wings if the band ever get to play live, but after The Rejects efforts in that direction it's not too likely. Not without trouble anyway.

Sadly, we've no photo of the band, but we are assured that they are all handsome bastards. Hard to believe of a Carlisle United fan, but there you go.

Look out for an album out soon in all good record shops (or the one or two who'll risk stocking it anyway). As soon as we hear it's out we'll let you know.

Probably the most interesting thing to happen at non-League Basingstoke Town last season was turning up for the match against Grays, which was sponsored non other than The Four Skins.

Obviously a wind-up (and a good one at that) we thought, but rumour has it that Gazza Hodges is hoping for a game or two with them next season.

Eat your heart out Gasgoine.

The sport of kick boxing is enjoying a boost in popularity, largely due to the films currently being made about the sport. It looks like doing for the Nineties what kung-fu did for martial arts in the Seventies.

Kick boxing isn't strictly a martial art. It mixes the noble art of boxing with Tae Kwon Do, a Korean martial art based heavily on footwork and kicks, and karate. What's more, while films tend to glorify the full contact version, there is also semi-contact and light contact bouts.

Oliver "The Sledgehammer" Karl (pictured above, courtesy of Clockwork Orange skinzine) is a Coburg skinhead who could teach most people a thing or two about kick boxing. Last year he came second in the German Amateur Kick Boxing Championships held in Berlin.

Anyone who fancies their chances in a kick boxing ring should look out for advertisements for clubs in their area. It is now becoming widely accepted as a sport in the U.K. and abroad, and one that tests your fitness to the limit.
